At a Vestry held in Camlough church, on Wednesday, May 16th, 1827, for the purpose of providing coffins for the poor, and for foundlings, at which all parishioners have a right to vote; it was resolved, that the sum of £. 6 be levied for a foundling to be placed out in the parish, or sent to the Foundling Hospital, at the discretion of the churchwardens, with 10 s. for clothing it.

I found it was necessary to hold the first vestry exclusively of Protestants, as it is probable, that if Roman Catholics had a power of voting at it, nothing, or at least very little, would be granted for the purposes required.

Fortescue Gorman, curate assistant.

N° 48.—Tamlaght.

We beg to state, that our applotments are so inconsiderable that in some cases we have not been scrupulous as to exact formality in all our proceedings. It is, however, understood, that in all assessments, except those mentioned in circular letter, all the landholders in the parish, of every denomination, are permitted to vote, and accordingly, while in resolutions, 1, 2, 3, the Roman Catholic inhabitants were not to have voted had a division occurred, it actually happened that in resolution 6, their liberty was exercised in a division upon the question. All the assessments, however, were made on the same day.

James Gorman, William Gibson, churchwardens.

The Vestry at which the above matters were voted, was distinct from any held for other parochial objects; but being the first after the new Vestry Act, and after the applotment under the Tithe Composition Act, and the church being besides deplorably old, and in want of much repair and necessary furniture, it was deemed impossible for that year to be completely accurate in the applotments. The same acreable sum, therefore, $2\frac{1}{2}d.$ making in the whole £. 100, was ordered to be levied, with an understanding, that if a saving in the articles applotted for, could be effected, any balance in favour of the parish should be credited to it.

Provision for foundling children, and for coffins for paupers, being variable, contingencies cannot be applotted for by anticipation.

The £. 100 voted for the year's expenditure, if levied acreably, would be at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}d.$; but as the Vestry interpreted the late Act, it is applotted according to value, upon the scale adopted in the Tithe Composition arrangement.

The accounts of the late churchwardens were examined, and it appeared that a balance of 388 l. 2 s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. remained in their hands to the credit of the Union, which balance was transferred to the custody of the new churchwardens, to be disposed of as already ordered by Vestry. It further appeared, that the sum of 3 l. 6 s. 9 d. is due to the parishioners by Mr. James Daly, of Prochlish, for costs of law proceedings, and the sum of 17 s. by Mr. Papworth, for repairing certain damages done to the church by his workmen, which two sums the churchwardens are directed to call in.

At a Vestry held June 19, 1827, it was resolved unanimously, that the sum of 11 l. sterling be levied off the Union, for the purpose of completing the sum requisite to purchase and put up a church bell, with its necessary appendages, and that the said 11 l. be laid out accordingly.
